Proposed City Budget Up 11 Percent With a Two-cent Tax Rate Increase

by Thomas X. White

City Manager Michael McLaughlin presented his Fiscal Year 2008 proposed budget to the Greenbelt City Council at its March 26 regular meeting. It calls for a two-cent property tax increase, on top of a 10 percent increase in property assessments, the hiring of two additional police officers plus two cadets, higher pay for police dispatchers and adding a capital projects manager. Another factor in the budget is funding the results of the first year of collective bargaining with the Fraternal Order of Police. These results have not yet been revealed. The extra workload on city staff caused by the negotiations led to the budget document not yet being available and was one of the factors cited for the increase in the proposed budget for the police department.

This year council's review of the budget began with a worksession on Wednesday, March 28 and will continue to a projected final adoption of the budget at the first June regular meeting on Monday, June 4. In all, there will be nine scheduled budget worksessions, two scheduled public hearings and final budget adoption, which affords a third public hearing for citizens.

FY07

For the city's current fiscal year, McLaughlin reported lots of good news. The long-awaited skate park was completed late this winter and is being well used. The second and final phase of the Community Center window restoration project is now underway.

Crime in Greenbelt is also down for the fourth year in a row, a total decrease of 27 percent since 2002. In addition, a convenience satellite postal operation with limited hours is in operation at the Municipal Building and the city passed a revised labor code and conducted its first collective bargaining with the rank and file members of the police department.

McLaughlin noted that other accomplishments from the prior year would appear when council reviews each department's budget. On the downside, he reported that the amount of city funds going into the available fund balance (reserves) was reduced from a proposed $302,000 to only $31,000. Instead, he said, this money had been needed for FY07 needs. These included $151,000 contributed to the Capital Projects Fund; higher than anticipated overtime costs of $150,000 (mostly attributed to the communications/dispatch personnel needs in the police department) and a drop of $140,000 in expected red-light camera fees. McLaughlin attributed this drop to a pattern of increasing compliance by the driving public and the changeover to a new digital-laser camera system last year requiring cameras to be out of operation for a period.

In the end, with little available income available for bolstering the city's fund balance, this balance will continue to hover at a level of 6.6 percent of overall city expenditures. The city's current goal is to

by James Giese

If developers Petrie-Ross Ventures succeed in their plans, the 78-acre north core of Greenbelt Station, currently called Greenbelt Station Towne Centre, will have two upscale anchor department stores of 140,000 and 220,000 square feet and another 350,000 square feet of smaller retail stores and restaurants on first and second floors alongside tree-lined avenues. These will be placed on what is now the massive parking lot for the Greenbelt Metro Station.

Also included in the developer's plans are two hotels and 1.6 million square feet of class "A" office space in six buildings, some to be 18 stories tall. Each single floor area will occupy between 20,000 to 40,000 square feet. In addition, 1,266 residential units averaging 1,300 square feet are included in the current plans.

A six-story parking structure will replace the on-ground Metro parking lot, providing 3,100 of the 3,500 spaces Metro requires. Another 8,300 spaces will be provided for other uses.

At a plan presentation on March 27, Walt Petrie empha-

Daughter Nominates Mother As an Outstanding Woman

by Andrea Miotto

I would like to propose my mother, Angela Miotto, for your series of articles on outstanding women in Greenbelt. My mother has a bachelor's degree in French and studied French for 12 years, all through Catholic school. When she graduated from Women's College of

Angela Miotto

University of North Carolina at Greensboro (now UNC-Greensboro) in 1960, she was recruited by the CIA to work in Washington, D.C.

The agency had come to her campus and conducted interviews of new graduates. She was lured to Washington by the idea of using her excellent French skills overseas as a secret agent. Then, when she got to Washington, she was placed immediately in the typing pool, much to her chagrin, because she was a woman.

Although she had absolutely no typing skills and was an expert French speaker, the agency forced her into secretarial work. When she asked to be sent overseas as an operative so as to put her education to use (this story is famous in our family) she was told, "We don't send our pretty young girls overseas."

After she married, my mother had five children in seven years and, when I (the youngest) was two, began going back to school to get her master's degree in counseling at Bowie State College. She graduated in five years with a 4.0 average while taking care of all of us who were under the age of 14. My mother then co-founded a nonprofit career counseling agency for displaced home-makers in 1978 in Bowie. This was one of the first organizations of its kind in the area, offering retraining and career seeking skills for divorced, deserted and widowed women who had been out of the paid workforce while taking care of children.

At the age of 45 my mother then went on to build a new career for herself as a career counselor, team leader in student services and finally director of career counseling and training at the University of Maryland University College, the adult education (or nontraditional-age) campus of UM. She was instrumental in helping the campus "re-engineer" its student services departments so that students more effectively received services such as financial aid, academic advising and career counseling. Her retirement in 1999 was regretted by devotees at the University of Maryland.

Since that time, she has been an enthusiastic and involved grandmother to seven grandchildren, has parented several wonderful pooches, has mentored women through the Montgomery County Life Skills Workshop (a program to help women coming out of prison or in recovery from addiction), has built a third career for herself as a part-time personal care assistant and has been a core member of the Catholic Community of Greenbelt, an alternative choice of worship communities for liberal Catholics in Greenbelt. She moved to Greenbelt in 2001.

One of her most extraordinary actions while living in Greenbelt was taking in a Cameroonian political refugee for a year, a person with whom she had only a slight acquaintance. This gentleman, a highly-educated economist, fled his homeland because he had been arrested and tortured for his political beliefs. My mother had met him through a mutual friend, hoping to polish her French with conversation.

After hearing his plight (he had nowhere to live while his immigration procedures dragged on), she did not hesitate to offer her spare room as a refuge. She also convinced her worship community to support this gentleman's efforts to stay in the U.S. The refugee, thankfully, was given political asylum and was later able to bring his family to this country.

My mother's dreams of travel in Europe, Australia and Mexico in the last 10 years brought her life to full circle and back to her dreams of travel as a college student.

In closing, my mother is an extraordinary role model for any woman – in fact, for any person hoping to follow their dreams and grow in self-confidence, self-awareness, self-giving and spirituality. She is a wonderful role model as a caring and supportive parent, wife and grandparent; a loyal and creative employee; a caring and contributing member of her civic and worship community; and a loving pet owner. She shows that a person can overcome sexism and rigid gender expectations to pursue education and build a career making use of her in-dwelling gifts and talents. She has reinvented herself several times, each time making her life more beautiful, giving, genuine and creative.

City Considers Legal Challenge of ICC

by James Giese

At the end of a worksession on a presentation of the plan for the Towne Centre of Greenbelt Station on March 27, the Greenbelt City Council met briefly with City Solicitor Robert Manzi to discuss the lawsuit filed by the Audubon Society challenging the approval by state authorities of the Intercounty Connector. Mayor Davis asked if it was possible for the city to become involved as an amicus curiae (friend of the court). Manzi replied that the time to do so was short.

Councilmember Ed Putens said he would like Manzi to explore the possibility of the city filing a suit. Councilmember Leta Mach agreed, noting that it might be too late or too costly to do so. The remaining members agreed that Manzi should look into the matter.

He thought that he might be able to have an answer in a week.

Celtic Concert Tuning Up for Arts Center

The Greenbelt Arts Center will present the annual Celtic Concert on Saturday, April 14 at 8 p.m. The Homespun Ceilidh Band will provide the music of Scotland and Ireland and other Celtic countries. The Greenbelt Arts Center is located at 123 Centerway in Roosevelt Center, in the lower level below the Co-op Supermarket.

“Ceilidh” (pronounced Kay-lee) is a Celtic word meaning “visit.” The Homespun Ceilidh Band is a nine-piece “Celtic big dance band” with toe-tapping, jump and dance jigs, reels and hornpipes as well as lyrical airs and even the occasional Irish polka. The repertory includes tunes from Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Isle of Man, Brittany and, by extension, Cape Breton/Nova Scotia and Quebec. The band has two fiddles – John Ward and Becky Ross; a hammered dulcimer – Bill Mitchell; a bouzouki and flute – Mike Stoddard; a cittern – Jim Stimson; a guitar – Glenn Arthur; a viola da gamba and recorder – Felicia Eberling; drums and vocals – Trix Whitehall; and drums and Irish step-dancing – Jennifer Lubell.

The band was formed in 1993 to play at the Greenbelt Arts Center for a special concert. They enjoyed it so much, they stayed together since then. They are well known in the area and have played at nearly all of the local Scottish festivals. More information on this group can be found at www.homespunceilidh.com.

There is a fee. Reservations may be made by calling 301-441-8770, voice mailbox #4.

Herring to Be Moved To Beaverdam Creek
On April 14 thousands of Americans will gather across the country at meaningful places to call for action on climate change. In Greenbelt, two activities are planned to observe the call for action.
One will be a River Herring Transplantation from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group will meet behind the Maryland-National Capital Park & Planning Commission offices at 6600 Kenilworth Avenue to collect herring from Northeast Branch. They will then release the herring in Beaverdam Creek near the intersection of Beaverdam Road and the B-W Parkway. Due to permitting restraints, space is limited to 30 so people should sign up early. Contact Kate Levendosky at 202-962-3374 or klevendosky@mwkog.org to RSVP. This is a way to learn about fish native to the Northeast Branch of the Anacostia River.
For those not wanting to transplant herring or who sign up too late, the second Greenbelt activity of the April 14 call for action on climate change will be a walk around Greenbelt Lake. No restrictions and no reservations are necessary. The purpose of the walk is to enjoy the local environment and learn about its wildlife and plant life. The group will meet at 10 a.m. at the entrance of Buddy Attick Park. Those who cannot make that time are urged to walk around the lake and enjoy it on their own.

Sculpting Class At Community Center
This spring the Greenbelt Community Center will offer a new art class, “Sculpting the Head,” taught by Annapolis-based artist Kris Sweedler.
Skilled in woodworking, metal-casting, sculpture, ceramics, painting and piano reconstruction, Sweedler has exhibited her art in local galleries and has worked professionally from her home studio. For the past couple of years she has led workshops at the Greenbelt Community Center in the popular, brilliantly-colored craft medium of polymer clay. In this new class, she will teach students to sculpt with plastiline – a wax-based, non-hardening clay. Students will create a single bust, one-half life size. They will also study the artistic anatomy of the head, explore sculpting techniques like using calipers to take measurements, examine a variety of busts and discuss various styles in historical context. Sweedler’s class is suitable for all skill levels, novices and experienced artists alike. No art training is necessary.
The class will meet Monday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. and will run for six weeks from April 16 through May 21. The course fee includes plastiline and all materials.
Enroll at the Community Center or visit www.greenbeltmd.gov/arts to download a registration form and view a full listing of spring art classes. For more information call 240-542-2060.

WITNESS FOR THE PROSECUTION

Directed by Richard Atha-Nichols
This classic courtroom drama tells the story of Sir Wilfred, a master criminal barrister who takes on the case of Leonard Vole, a man arrested for the murder of a wealthy spinster. Vole’s only alibi witness is his wife, the calm and coldly calculating Romaine Vole. When she agrees to be a witness for the prosecution, it leaves Sir Wilfred little to go on. Will he prove Vole’s innocence or will he go to the gallows? This is Agatha Christie at her best, with more twists and turns than a British country lane.
Show dates are Friday and Saturday evenings, April 27-May 19, 2007 at 8 p.m. with Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. on May 6 & 13. All performances will be held at the Greenbelt Arts Center, 123 Centerway in Greenbelt. Tickets are $12.50 regular admission, $10 for students and seniors. Sometimes life gets hard and we wonder why things go wrong, but let's not forget the greatest of virtues — patience.

God explains to us, in the Qur'an: "Be sure we shall test you with something of fear and hunger, some loss in goods or lives or the fruits (of your toil), but give glad tidings to those who patiently persevere; who say, when afflicted with calamity: 'To God we belong, and to Him is our return.' They are those on whom (descend) blessings from God, and mercy, and they are ones that receive guidance."

— The Holy Quran 2:155-157

This is the guidance sent forth to humankind by the Prophet Muhammed (peace be upon him) nearly 1400 years ago. And it is still relevant today. For more information about the Qur'an, call 301-982-9463 or email us at info@searchislam.org or visit www.searchislam.org

Greenbelt as Tree City Takes Care of Its Own

by Barbara Hopkins

Trees and fields in Greenbelt’s public spaces have a chance to become healthier now that the Greenbelt City Council at its meeting on March 26 has approved the purchase of a deep tine aerator. Assistant Director of Public Works Bill Phelan says the equipment will make the city’s field and tree maintenance program easier and more efficient. The city council unanimously approved a resolution to negotiate purchase of the aerator from Finch Services, Inc. of Westminster at a cost of $15,500.

In recent years the city has contracted for the aeration of Braden Field to improve drainage and turf. This action has cost the city between $3,000 and $4,000 a year.

In addition, public works staff have pursued a time-consuming effort to slow the decline of some of Greenbelt’s mature trees by deep aeration to reduce soil compaction and introduction of nutrients and oxygen to the roots.

In a memo requesting the aerator, Phelan said removal of a large, mature tree can cost $1,000 or more; he cited soil compaction as the city’s biggest factor leading to tree decline. Vertical mulching and soil injection, he said, have shown encouraging effects on trees where such practices have been applied.

The heavy-duty soil reliever to be purchased will pull cores 10 to 12 inches deep and allow for expansion of the aeration work to additional ballfields and trees. Phelan said it would be unlikely that all fields and trees could be done on a yearly basis but he felt a three-year rotation program would be feasible.

The aerator will be purchased in the Replacement Fund, which will be reimbursed with funds currently budgeted for annual aeration. The cost would be completely covered in five years. Staff agenda notes estimate the expected life span of the aerator at 15 years.

48 Greenbelt Participants Aid Successful Cleanups

by Cindy Murray, Recycling Coordinator

On Saturday, March 31 a record number of 48 Greenbelt volunteers participated in the area-wide 19th Annual Potomac Watershed Clean-Up. The City of Greenbelt hosted two cleanup sites, one at Greenbelt Lake and the other at the Springhill Lake Stream. Volunteers included members of the Greenbelt City Council, Greenbelt Recycling and Environment Advisory Committee, Greenbelt Advisory Planning Board, Eleanor Roosevelt High School National Honor Society, Friends of Still Creek, GLAD, the Committee to Save the Green Belt and Boy Scout Troop 298. The volunteers removed a total of 1,240 lbs. of trash and 35 lbs. of recyclables from these locations.

Another cleanup site in Greenbelt was hosted by the Friends of Still Creek. This group concentrated on a portion of Still Creek adjacent to the Greenbelt East Recycling Center. Approximately 900 lbs. of trash was removed from this area.

In my official capacity I am so pleased at the number of people that came out to help this year. Their enthusiasm and support has made this one of our most successful cleanups to date.

Throughout the Potomac Watershed, over 3,000 volunteers removed 103 tons of trash, 915 tires and 92,700 recyclable beverage containers at over 141 cleanup sites in Maryland, D.C., Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

rebuild the fund to 10 percent.

Also in current year FY07 assessments for property values were higher by $60,000. The city received its first payment ($60,000) from the developers of the Greenbelt Station project; a second payment of $180,000 will be due in FY08. Except for the increased expenditures over budget noted above, other FY07 expenditures were right on target.

FY08 Expectations

The proposed FY08 budget totals $23.5 million, a 10.7 percent increase over FY07 projected expenditures. Funding such an increase relies mostly on property valuations increasing 13.6 percent. Residential properties (detached, condo and co-op) have increased 10 percent. Commercial property valuations (rental apartments, retail and office) increased 16 percent. McLaughlin proposes a two cent increase in the city's tax rate to fund the budget.

Using as a theme "Public Safety, Public Safety, Public Safety," McLaughlin advised council that the bulk of the budget increase will go to Public Safety with the department budget increasing 14 percent ($1.2 million). Two new officers will be added as part of the Greenbelt Station development agreement. The Department also plans to re-institute the Police Cadet Program with two new cadets, noting that the program accounts for six of the current officers.

To address excessive overtime experience in FY07, the budget proposes upgrading the Communication Specialist position in order to improve recruitment and retention for what is a very critical and stressful position. As noted earlier, the increase also helps fund the city's first ever Collective Bargaining Agreement.

The manager also cautioned council that the city's force is "graying," that a large number of experienced officers will retire in the next 10 years and that from both a regional and national perspective recruitment and retention are becoming more difficult.

Other Departments

Other departments for which McLaughlin proposes increases include General Government, up 5 percent, and Planning and Community Development, up 14 percent. A new position in that department will be funded by the higher license fees enacted last year, however.

The Public Works Department is up only 2 percent. On the other hand, the proposed budget for Greenbelt CARES and the Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program are down 2.5 percent on the expectation that no Livable Communities grant will be available next year from the county, which is currently funding a volunteer coordinator.

For the GAIL program, McLaughlin said a proposal to fund a case manager to assist with the increasingly popular program could not be funded in his proposed budget. Nevertheless, he felt the idea had merit and would greatly assist the GAIL program overall. The city's recreation program is up 1.7 percent with some savings coming from the retirement of long-tenured employees.

Look to Future

McLaughlin announced that his FY08 budget includes funding for what has been called a "visioning" project for Greenbelt. Earlier councils had engaged in focused visioning and strategic planning but, in recent times, because of lack of time, interest and resources, only infrequent updates and follow-through had been possible on council and city goals. He also advised council that his proposed budget allows for a 3 percent cost of living allowance (COLA) for city employees and that he is also recommending that the city fund the additional employer cost for the improved State Retirement Plan in the amount of $120,000.

McLaughlin apologized for being late with the printed version of the budget. As always, he gave special thanks to key staff who have been assisting him in its development, calling out Jeff Williams, David Moran and Anne Marie Belton on the budget team and Beverly Palau for her assistance in the presentation and the budget document itself.

Police Focus on Seat Belt Safety

by MPO Scott Kaiser, Greenbelt Police

The Greenbelt Police Department will be one of the many police agencies in Prince George's County participating in the 2007 Maryland Chiefs Challenge. The Chiefs Challenge is a two-month campaign running through June 3 focusing on increasing seat belt/safety seat usage in the state. In Prince George's County close to 32 percent of fatally injured drivers were unrestrained. Focusing on increased seat belt/safety seat usage, law enforcement officials are hoping to drastically reduce these numbers.

Educational seminars will also be conducted, child safety seats will be checked, schools will be visited and surveys will be completed. Public safety ads will be released often. The intent is not punishment by issuing tickets but to make motorists think twice about not buckling up, hopefully preventing injury or saving lives.

sized to the Greenbelt City Council that at the moment the plan is just a piece of paper and is subject to change. The only thing fairly certain is the Metro parking structure, which is close to being signed off on, he felt. The anchor tenants will have a great deal to say on the location of their buildings and on their design. The plan contemplates their siting at separate ends of the project, one near the Metro station, the other beside the Beltway.

Petrie said the demographics to support upscale retail were “out of sight,” meaning that the population to be served by the projected retail is more than able to support high-end stores. The most significant concern for retailers, he felt, was potential traffic congestion on the Beltway and other roads. He indicated that the developers were in discussion with major retailers and was optimistic that the city would get the kind of upscale stores that it and the county are seeking.

Amenities

Petrie and his associates emphasized the many amenities of the project. A pedestrian bridge over Indian Creek will be built to connect a main avenue of the project to Springhill Lake at the intersection of Breezewood and Springhill Drives. Another pedestrian/bicycle access trail leads to the south core development of residences, where another pedestrian connection to Springhill Lake is planned. Within the project 3.2 miles of pedestrian/bicycle trails are proposed.

Besides the existing Metro rail and bus service to the Towne Centre, additional transit service within Greenbelt Station and possibly to Springhill Lake and Beltway Plaza are contemplated.

The number of roads to access the property will be increased to support the higher density development.

Two additional ramps are to be constructed from Beltway/I-95 to provide access from and to the east/south area in addition to the existing access ramps to and from the west/north. The connector road, expected to be under construction this summer, will intersect Greenbelt Road near the bridge over the rail lines. From there it will extend northward through the south core tract and along the western edge of the Towne Centre as a boulevard and end at a traffic circle with Metro Drive, the existing access road from Springhill Lake, as well as the off-ramps from the Beltway.

A boulevard in the shape of a J in the street plan will run from that traffic circle through the center of the Towne Center to a plaza before the Metro station entrance, where it will curve southeastward to end at an intersection with the south core connector road. The Metro parking garage will be positioned along this road.

At right angles to the J-road will be another boulevard running from the south core road to the northwest corner of the property at the crossing of the Beltway over the tracks, where a new on-ramp for east-bound Beltway traffic will be constructed. This road will have traffic circles at either end and with the J-road intersection in the heart of the new development. One department store is proposed at that intersection.

Some 3.4 acres are called open space by the developers. Of that, one acre will be a plaza in front of the Metro station. Another 0.85 acres will be a triangular park, proposed as a dog park, at the southernmost point of the north core.

Another area, called a café plaza, is intended for café goers to use to eat and drink out doors, much as is being done currently at Roosevelt Center. A recreation plaza will have a basketball court. There will be another pair of plazas at the traffic circle at which Beltway and Springhill Lake traffic will enter the Towne Centre.

City Concerns

Mayor Judith Davis and other councilmembers raised a list of concerns previously expressed about this development by city officials. Building heights and the recent balloon demonstration to show the impact of such construction were discussed.

Petrie said it was necessary to build taller buildings than originally thought because soil studies found the site unsuitable for underground construction. All buildings must be placed on pilings.

Davis was concerned about Metro parking and the fact that the city had been excluded from the discussions. Celia Craze, the city’s planning and development coordinator, also expressed concern that the city had not been involved.

Davis was concerned about how the building would look but Petrie assured her it would not look like a typical parking structure. He agreed to have the city participate in a meeting with Metro before final closure on the parking structure design.

Davis raised questions about recreational facilities and where the kids will play. Petrie said this was not intended to be a family community. Fitness type facilities and recreational facilities would be developed at the hotels, he speculated, in addition to the outdoor recreation court and the hiker/biker trails.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts was concerned with wetland mitigation and the failure of some current mitigation efforts. A consultant was already being used, it was noted. Petrie proclaimed that “we are going to solve this problem to the state’s and city’s satisfaction.”

Councilmember Edward Putens was concerned about security. Petrie said the owners would have their own security force and would integrate its work with the Greenbelt Police Department. The developers have also entered an agreement to provide the city $720,000 for six additional police officers.

Councilmember Leta Mach said that a big issue with the city was the need for additional school facilities. Petrie was unaware of this issue but commented on their belief that this project would be a low generator of additional children to the community.

Councilmember Konrad Herling was concerned with overall transportation. He noted he was working toward organizing a charrette to deal with this issue.

Council raised the subject of including affordable housing in the project. Again, Petrie said that issue was new to him; now that it had been raised, he said, he would give some thought to it.

Mach objected to the spelling of Towne Centre. She noted that Greenbelt already has a town center, Roosevelt Center. Petrie said that was the sort of comments he wanted to hear. If something was bothering someone, he wanted to know.

Davis questioned why so much office space was proposed when the rental market for office space is so poor. Petrie said that the amount could change but noted it was needed to offset other uses and to keep the number of daily trip generations within set limits. He also said Greenbelt Station would be a bull’s eye for offices because it was one of the few Metro stops where persons could go either to Baltimore or Washington.

Craze noted that the county-approved conceptual site plan had a higher floor space limit for office buildings than was in the city’s agreement with the developers. She looked to the city’s agreement being enforceable.

City Attorney Robert Manzi noted, however, that the agreement could be modified if both parties were in agreement. Petrie again advocated that the established trip generation limit should be the controlling factor, not square footage. Davis emphasized that the project should be designed for mixed use, viable both during the daytime and night. There was general agreement on this point.

Herling wished Greenbelt to become a center for environmental technology. Davis said the development must be a place to show public art.

More to Come

Winding up the meeting, Davis told Petrie, “We heard your presentation and you have heard ours. But I don’t want you to leave with the belief that we are in agreement. There will be future meetings for that.”

Petrie said that his company has a good track record of dealing with municipalities, such as Laurel and Forestville. Some of their other ongoing projects were mentioned, including shopping centers at Laurel, Glen Burnie and Largo Commons and mixed-use developments at Annapolis Towne Centre at Parole, Woodmore Towne Centre at Glenarden and Savage Towne Centre. Since the company was formed in 2000 by the former executives of “the nation’s leading developers and retailers,” the company claims the acquisition, redevelopment and development of over three million square feet of retail space with another three million in process.

Greenbelt Fire Dept. Has a Busy Year

by James Giese

Last year was the busiest year in recent memory for fire and rescue calls according to the website for the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad, Inc. (www.engine35.com). The increase of 151 total calls was more than four percent greater than for 2005. In 2006 there were 71 more calls to which the fire engines responded and 80 more calls to which the rescue squad responded. The website notes that while engine calls fluctuate somewhat from year to year, there has been a steady increase in calls for ambulance services.

Engine calls in 2003, the first year listed on the website, were 1,629 compared to 1,896 in 2006. Ambulance calls were 1,531 in 2003 and 1,896 in 2006. Total calls were 3,151 in 2003; 3,117 in 2004; 3,403 in 2005; and 3,554 in 2006.

GHI Companion Animal Project, City Budget Receive Awards

by Barbara Hopkins

Two new awards are gracing different areas within Greenbelt, it was announced at the meeting of the Greenbelt City Council on March 26.

GHI Award

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) bestowed its Community Partnership Award on the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) Companion Animal Committee. The award was given at COG’s third annual Animal Services Awards on March 2.

GHI’s committee chair Kris White was present at the council meeting to talk about the award. She said it is unusual for a group to be nominated and win the first time out.

White said GHI’s rules are unusual in that animals are not allowed to be tethered or chained within GHI nor are they permitted to be at large in a yard when no resident is at home. Not many communities throughout the country have such rules, she said, adding that GHI may become a model for other communities of its type. White said studies have shown chained dogs have psychological and physiological damage. They tend to become more aggressive because they cannot get away from perceived danger.

The Companion Animal Committee has been successful in their efforts to get small animal oxygen masks for the Greenbelt Fire Department and is still working to equip the six other fire departments that respond to calls in Greenbelt.

She also described the red scarf program that the committee is trying to introduce in Greenbelt. In this program dogs or other animals that may respond in a less than friendly way when approached by strangers wear a red scarf to say, “Do not approach without permission.”

Budget Award

City Manager Michael McLaughlin has accepted the Distinguished Budget Presentation Award from the Government Finance Officers Association (GFOA) for the city’s Fiscal Year 2007 budget.

The award is given in recognition of a budget document that is of highest quality as a policy document, operations guide, financial plan and communications device in meeting the needs of decision makers and citizens. In the council meeting agenda comments, the award is called the highest form of recognition in governmental budgeting.

GFOA, founded in 1906, is “dedicated to sound management of government finance resources,” according to the organization’s web site.

Free UM Concert

The School of Music’s symphonic band will feature graduate student conductors, members of the UM Symphony Orchestra and violinist Jun Young Park, runner-up of the 2006 UMSO Concerto Competition, at a concert on Tuesday, April 10 at 8 p.m.

This free program includes Handel’s “Royal Fireworks Music,” Berg’s Violin Concerto, Wagner’s “Siegfried Idyll” and Brahms’s Serenade No. 2 in A Major. It will be held in Dekelboum Concert Hall of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center.
